Castro Fears

TWENTY PAGES—TEN CENTS

HAVANA (P)-The Cuban Cabinet made a thinly veiled bid today for a change in U.S. policy toward Fidel Castro's regime under the incoming Kennedy administration. There was no indication of any change in Castro's policy toward the United States, however.

Castro's frantic preparations against "invasion" from the United States extended today to Havana's seafront Malecon Drive. Soldiers spent the night building emplacements. Then militiamen installed dozens of antiaircraft guns and medium-caliber field guns.

The cabinet also authorized the death penalty for all anti-Castro terrorists, saboteurs and their accomplices. Trials are expected soon for 30 persons accused of bomb making and arson.

By OSWALD JACOBY

Written for NEA The race is not always to the swift nor the battle to the strong and in duplicate bridge the best play won't always produce the best score, but play will win for you.

When today's hand was played at the New York National almost every South player wound up at three notrump and west always opened the four of spades.

East would win the first trick with the king and return the suit to knock out dummy's ace.

The slap-dash declarers would promptly run off five diamond tricks and make either five or six odd depending on whether or not the defense hung on to the right cards. Incidentally, any defenders who failed to hang on to the right cards to block the slam would have to be pretty poor players.

The best declarers adopted a different line of play and attacked the diamond suit by playing low. This held them to four diamond tricks only and produced a bad score, but their play was correct.

Why was this losing play correct? Because a 4-2 break in a 3-3 break. The low diamond play would have gained a trick for declarer if diamonds had happened to break 4-2 and since declarer was not looking at the East and West cards he was right to use the best percentage play at his disposal.

School District 117 Community News

Miss Elsie Evans and Farrel Patterson, the deans at Jacksonville High school, know each student not only as an individual personality but also as a profile sheet revealed by a comprehensive testing program in the high school. This testing program is carried on in the high school in order that all students may profit to the fullest extent in his secondary education. Miss Evans is in charge of this group testing, assisted by Mr. Patterson, who also does the interpretation for the boys.

-District 117-

Beginning in the spring of the eighth grade, oncoming freshmen are given two tests-one in mathematics and one in reading. From these tests the students are then properly grouped according to ability upon entering high school. The reading test can reveal a student qualified for the accelerated English classes or one who requires remedial work. A freshman can be placed in either general mathematics or in algebra according to his ability as shown by the mathematics test. The theory behind this is to place the individual student in the proper classes as he enters high school. It is felt that there is obvious harm in placing young people in classes too difficult for them as there is in placing those in classes too easy for their

-District 117-

While the initial placement testing is vital, the program seemingly has begun to evolve as the student reaches his freshman year. In early fall, the first year students are given a mental test and also an aptitude test. A profile sheet is devised and discussed with each student along with the scores of previous tests. In this way, the deans can help each student plan his program through high school. There is, too, assistance in individual adjustment to high school and consideration of a future occupation even in the freshman year. This counseling is done by both Miss Evans and Mr. Patterson.

-District 117-

In the sophomore year a personality test is administered, profiled, and discussed briefly with each student. This second year in high school is the lightest in the testing program.

As the junior year gets underway, the testing program develops momentum giving the University of Illinois State-wide High School Test to all students. Following closely, comes the Interest Inventory Test, better known as the Kuder Preference. The student in the junior year receives much vocational and college counseling. At this point in his secondary education, a student usually is considering the choice of a college; the guidance available from the deans seems valuable here. It is also recommended that the third year student take the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test and the Preliminary Scholasic Achievement Test if they plan to go to college. Students may participate their junior year in the College Boards as practice before the actual test in the senior year. The College Board testing is not done by the high schools.

-District 117-

The senior year, the final phase in this testing program, offers to the Jacksonville High School students the American Council Testing Program along with additional vocational and college counseling as desired by individual students.

-District 117-

Along with this complete testing program, individual tests may be given to students at the request of parents or suggestion of teachers or counselors. The test usually used in this case is the Stanford-Benet Mental Test.

-District 117-

Parents not only are welcome but encouraged to ask for conference with the deans regarding any tests given in this program. Each student is fully counseled concerning each test taken; it is the policy never to give a test that is not discussed with the student afterwards and to interpret the meaning of the results for each individual.

A BOY IN THE SPACE AGE

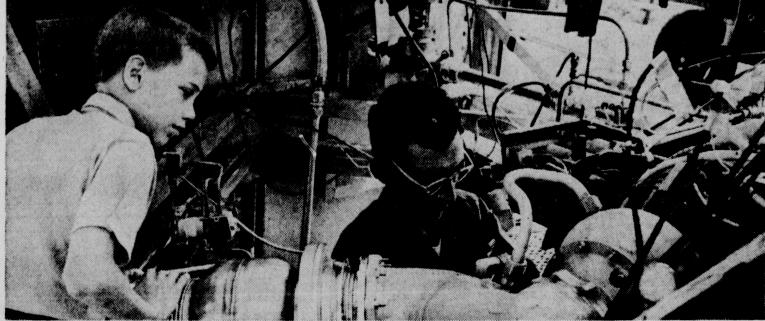

Roger peers into throat of rocket engine. A few minutes later, in test firing, an ignited mixture of liquid oxygen and liquid ammonia poured more than 500,000 horsepower of energy out of the nozzle.

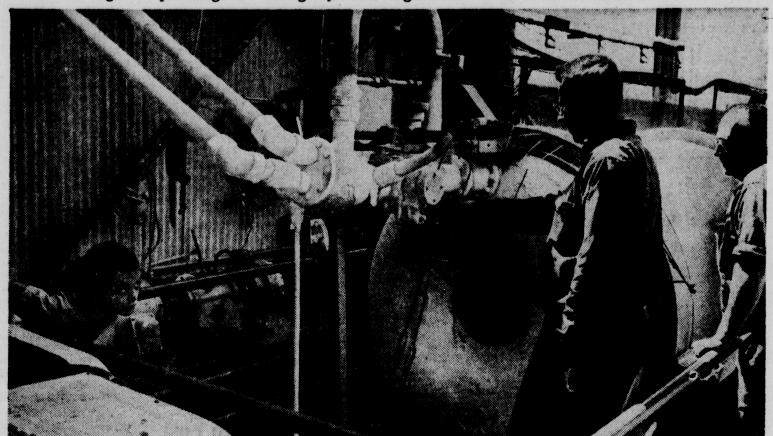

Poger Kuchs is eight years old. He lives in a small New Jersey town near a rocket engine plant where his father, Harry Kuchs, a top rocket expert, is in charge of the development and building of the 500,000 horsepower liquid rocket engine which is currently being installed in the X-15 air space craft. Its makers expect it to propel the manned X-15 at a record breaking 4,000 miles an hour at an altitude of at least 100 miles - faster and higher than man has ever gone before.

One day recently an excited Roger visited his father at work, at the Thiokol Chemical plant, in Denville. It was a visit most lads dream about. For two hours, young Roger scampered over the test stands, peered into the exhaust nozzle, watched technicians make adjustments in the maze of piping valves and instruments, gaped at men in protective rubber suits and helmets, played with the engine's throttle in the control room, similar to that which the pilot will use. Finally he had his ears stuffed with cotton in order that he could stand outside the control blockhouse and hear what 500,000 horsepower sounds like.

Maze of engine's "plumbing" and wiring captivates Roger as he watches technician make final test check.

He watches technicians inspect lines that carry liquid oxygen and liquid ammonia to engine's fuel tanks.

In blockhouse where firing tests are recorded, Roger handles throttle that controls engine's thrust.

Now Is The Time

Crisis and near-crisis have been the rule for the United States and the world almost continuously since World War

In that 15-year span the earth has in many ways been made over by the great boom in population, the accelerated industrial-scientific revolution, the emergence of countless newly independent nations.

Overlaying all these fundamental changes has been the unrelieved tension enforced by the struggle between freedom and Communist tyranny.

The accumulation of unsolved problems is immense. The complexities of the age almost defy unraveling.

No one dares contemplate whether there is somewhere a breaking point beyond which the world and this country cannot move successfully under this crushing load. But this much may well be said right now.

From here on, any American government worth its salt must operate at two major levels. Certainly this goes for the Kennedy administration.

On the one, it must attack the immediate problems-declining employment in a sagging economy, the outward flow of gold and our deteriorating international economic position, the lag in the building of schools, houses, roads, the threat to Berlin, nuclear testing and disarmament, the menace of Communism in Cuba, Asia, Africa, Latin America.

On the broader level it must begin to find means of coping with the vast shifts in the world's and this nation's

The population boom is world-wide. It is also an American phenomenon. Every aspect of our life is affected by it. How do we propose to meet the problem?

We have built a massive economy whose wage-price structure rises so high that some of its products now seem beyond the range of markets both here and abroad.

As this structure goes on soaring, it adds untold billions to the cost of our absolute necessities-not only schools and houses and roads but public facilities of many kinds and the general upkeep of our swelling metropolitan cen-

We see before us the paradox of unparalleled economic potential and great cities wondering where those needed extra dollars will come from.

Our people multiply in record numbers, their needs mount, yet we cannot bring ourselves to think that we must add to already mountainous tax burdens to meet these problems.

So the richest nation on earth has generally inadequate police forces, insufficient hospital and other welfare services, transportation systems bogged in financial troubles, cultural enterprises that wallow in a sea of deficits.

The long-range crisis is more than "material," it also touches the spirit. We have slipped into a mood of comfort and convenience-and disorder. We seem to demand above all that living be fun and that it be easy.

Thus it is that our young boys, raised on the world's fullest diet. find themselves outdone by British girls in tests of physical prowess. No wonder juvenile gangs must attack in the ratio

In his campaign, President-elect Kennedy said he would ask sacrifice of the American people. Perhaps no promise he made is more important to keep.

If this nation is to move on its high road of destiny, it must be called to a new mood-of hard work, service, fulfillment of obligation, discipline, order, deep caring for what lies beyond one's own door.

It is already late. The time to start is now, January, 1961.

Business Mirror

By SAM DAWSON

AP Business News Analyst NEW YORK (AP)—Steel labor and management sit down today to tackle a problem that plagues not only the industry but also federal and local authorities and business in general.

em of joblessness and short weeks that affect the families of thousands both in and .ut of the mills In terms of dollars it's the problem of slipping sales and profits of the companies, of their suppliers, of those who sell to or serve the steel workers.

In the field of governments it's the problem of jobless and other social benefits, and lower tax re-

In the broader scene the troubles in steel tinge the outlook of the whole economy, since so much 1961 is for slowly rising steel output but whether this will bring immediate re-employment isn't

Profit Picture Dim The expected slow rise in steel output as 1961 continues—much of the increase doubtless in the latter part of the year - will still leave the profit picture in doubt. Wage scales have risen recently squeezing profit margins further and offsetting at least in part the rise in productivity.

And the steel industry is still up against growing competition of its best markets, as well as the successful hunt of many steel users for ways to cut down on the amount of steel needed in their activities.

The immediate problems that steel management and labor are discussing today rise also from two other things. First is the slowdown in activity in many of steel's prime customers — appliances railroads, and to some extend in construction. Also, the big customer, the auto industry, uses less steel in its compact cars along with greater use of glass

Second is the tendency of cus comers to live off their steel stocks through most of the last half of 1960. Inventories had been built up in a big splurge of steel buying early in the year, and then as often as not users found demand for their products slumping. As yet steel customers show little tendency to rebuild stocks. But most steel executives say that soon more users will have to stop living off inventories and at least order on a hand-to-mouth basis as many now do.

Union and company representa ives meet today as the industry starts an expected climb back from a holiday week slump that saw output at its lowest for any nonstrike period in more than 20

Thanks to the spurt in the openng months, the year as a whole vasn't bad for the industry. It turned out 99.3 million tons, the ighest production since 112.7 million tons in 1957.

But the slowdown since midyear has taken its toll both on profits and jobs. And if the confab in Washington can figure out ways to beat competition, increase sales, hold down costs, make more jobs and fatten steelworkers' incomes, the whole economy would be pleased, if slightly surprired.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

NEW YORK-(NEA)-Jerry Lucas, the newest and perhaps the greatest of basketball's glamor boys, kicked up the biggest storm in per cent settled, said promoter New York since Hurricane Donna.

Straight out of a story book, the big, handsome, brilliant, 21year-old legitimate straight-A student of Ohio State at once became a bigger rage than hula hoops or trampolines in his first Madison Square Garden appearance.

The king size Pete Dawkins, the most magnetic attraction in Rothschild said Feb. 25 is the round ball, professional or college, had New Yorkers tearing down the target date for the television walls seeking entry to the famous building on Eighth Avenue.

These fortunate enough to gain admission were practically as frenetic about Lucas' well-nigh faultless performance. And in his initial outing against Seton Hall, the big old country boy out of Middletown, Ohio, had a temperature and what was described as a slight touch of influenza.

"That so?" remarked Joe Lapchick, the original Original Celtic coaching Brooklyn St. John's. "If that's the case I'd hate to send my kids against Ohio State when that guy is in good health."

Lucas is a living fictional All-America boy right down to marrying his college sweetheart, the beauteous Treva. This lad should have no trouble-certainly not financial-when he completes his education in June of 1962. He will be in position to write his own ticket, either in professional basketball or in the business world, where offers mount.

Majoring in Business Management and Marketing, Lucas is in school on an academic, not an athletic, scholarship. With his ability, reputation, personality and charm, he is a lead-pipe cinch to quickly become an executive at the top management level.

He is the one tremendous athlete who could give the money ranks the back of his neck without considerable financial loss at the outset. John W. Galbreath, the industrialist-construction mansportsman, is one of numerous big shots with an eye on this kid.

Will Lucas turn pro?

"As of right now, the answer is no," replied the soft-spoken star who is adored by extremely capable teammates. "I don't fancy playing the 85 games that comprise exhibitions and the championship season and living out of a suitcase for five months, from late October until late March, particularly the latter.

"A lot of people don't realize it, but a professional basketball player in season is rarely in one place for more than two days. I wouldn't like that"

Perhaps the earnest young man would play professionally for a season or two just to show the cock-eyed world that he could

"To me, that would be totally unimportant," was the retort "I don't have to prove myself." Lucas, son of Mark Lucas, foreman of a paper box plant in Middletown, which is hard by Dayton, had more than 75 propositions as a high school All-America. He stands six feet seven-anda-half, weighs 220 pounds. His incredible coordination and long, loping stride, which sends him down with the other two swiftest Buckeyes in the fast break, belie his size. "You don't coach a kid like Jerry Lucas," said Freddie Taylor

-OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day-"All Foal's Day"

David Niven, then a Colonel in the British service, stumped an American answer team on a transatlantic radio quiz show when author Christopher Morley and actor Frank Fay were ble to name the universal birthday of the race horse. Morley got credit for a brave try when he suggested that it might be "All Foal's Day". Actually, it is January 1. No matter when a horse is actually born, or foaled, he becomes a yearling on the following January 1. On his second New Year's Day the young Thoroughbred becomes a 2-year-old and eligible to go out and earn his oats on the race track. Little note is taken of a horse's true birth date ception. Until he died November 1, 1947, Man o' War was afforded a national birthday party in the press each year on his actual birthday. As his groom Will Harbut proudly told all visitors: "He was folded March 29, 1917, at Major Belmont's place. Mr. Riddles bought him for $5,000 at Saratoga as a yearling . . . a man come here and offered a million dollars for him and Mr. Riddles said, 'No, lots of men might have a million dollars, but only one man has Man o' War. 'No Ma'am, he ain't no trotter . . . stand still now, Red."
